MR. ELAVELLE REFLECTS REAL CREDIT ON GOVT.

By H. F. G.

It transpires that the Munitions Board is not big enough for two big men like J. W. Flavelle and General Bertman. They are both very popular and each can be completely happy only when the other is away. Besides there is the feeling in General Bertman's bosom that he has been supplanted and naturally he does not love his supplanter nor his supplanter him.

Ever since General Bertman was thrown into the background by the appointment of Mr. Elavelle as the efficiency man of the Conservative party, the General has been making explanations. The gist of his defense is that he saved the British Government $42,000,000 on $345,000,000 worth of shells—that is to say he got the shells made for $93,000,000 which was $300,000 less than the War Office estimate. What he did was not an admirable thing to do, but that Lloyd George considered that an even greater saving might have been effected is shown by the fact that he sent very shrewd ambassadors over to Canada to find out how long General Bertman and his committee intended to keep it up.

It was, however, Lloyd George's idea to save $300,000,000 and not ours and that the Canadian Munitions Board could do a great deal better than shade it off $42,000,000. He probably felt that a War Office estimate, drafted in a hurry when there was a desperate famine in shells, should not hold good longer than a year after the war started. The minister to Mr. Elavelle, Mr. H. M. Elford, was to tell the Shell Committee that England wouldn't go on paying famine prices for shells for ever even if it was Canada that was getting the money. In diplomatic language, but clear within, Mr. Thomas intimated that England had no more intention of being robbed by Canada than the United States had of being intimated in its borders. Mr. Elford was a member of the family and might be expected to have fidal feelings toward the Mother Country whereas the United States was only a second cousin. At all events Mr. Thomas hinted that the shell war was over and that the industry would now be placed on a business basis. What he did not say did not take the hint but went on handing out big orders to its own members at the same stiff old prices. Mr. Thomas promptly reorganized it—or what amounts to the same thing—he left orders which were carried out.

When Mr. Thomas was on this continent he spent considerable time in New York, a phase of his visit which the trouble he got into in New York too, was completely overshadowed. But he did good work there too. In New York as at Ottawa, was a Munitions Committee engaged in purchasing supplies for the British Government, a committee appointed like the one at Ottawa on the recommendation of Major General Sir Sam Braine. Mr. Thomas was a local member. According to his friends that is Sir Sam's great gift, getting things done no matter what they are done or who gets done in the process. At any rate Mr. Thomas gave the New York committee the once over and decided that its methods, like those at Ottawa, were needing revision, while at the same time he got into a bit of a tiff with the old-timers of the New York Purchasing Committee too. England has thousands of factories and millions of hands turning out guns and shells and the United States no longer commands a rush order market. Consequently, the prices have been halved.

Mr. Elford's services can no longer be sold to the Committees at $37 per thousand rounds and invoices to the British Government at $35, marking a spread of over half a million dollars on an average order. Mr. Thomas put end to that. He cut out the "sugar" and ammunition can now be bought in the United States bridge repaying the road and at a moderate appreciation of its future military value. That has been done.

With the partial effacement of Gen. Elford, the government will appear in the old Bertman, who, by the way, has columns of this paper.

The British Oath

We will make peace, but not before
We've cleansed the sea from shore to shore,
Restored its blue, restored the name
Of sailor to its rank of yore.

The Provost-Marshal of the seas—
When did he treat with pirates,
And why should he with you make peace?

The sailor man, who, fighting men,
Slew women with his left hand then
Crushed children with his blood-stained right—
Tirpit! . . . Behold that sight
Thyself—and hear this solemn oath
That serves for you and Wilhelms, both:

"We will make peace, when at our door
We swing you no the last gun's roar;
You, and your thrice-damned Emperor."

—Henry de Vere Stacpoole.

SECOND APPEAL

Somewhat over a year ago, the President of the Canadian Patriotic Fund made an appeal to the people of the Dominion for funds to assist the families of the gallant men who were going to fight for freedom. Though the response was far from what was expected, the president appealed to the public again to help him prepare for the magnificent cause in which the call was met. Money has poured into the treasury of the Fund until the total contributions have reached and exceeded six million dollars.

Large, however, as this sum appears, it has not greatly exceeded current demands, so if we want to assist the immediate future, the entire surplus on hand would be required before all the men of the Expeditionary Force could again return home.

To day there are 25,000 families comprising, it is estimated, 80,000 individuals dependent upon the Patriotic Fund.

As far as I am able to recollect, the demands upon the fund will increase in the succeeding month, continue to grow, so that it is estimated that, should the War continue during 1916, a sum amounting to some $8,000,000 and probably more will be required. This would, however, only mean $1 per head of the population for the people of Canada, and is not indeed a bad sum of those who remain at home in comparison with the sacrifice in men and limb of those who are fighting in defense of the Nation.

In spite of all the various calls that have been made for funds to aid our soldiers and sailors and the magnificent response that has been made in each and every case, I still feel assured that the warm hearts of all Canadians will respond to this further appeal.

It is my opinion that the Canadian people will respond to this call to contribute in a most cordial manner.

In the Meadow Creek district, over five miles of poles were set. It requires the pulling of over eleven miles of wire before this district is cleared of them.

In the district east of Claresholm six miles of poles were set, upon which was string eighteen miles of wire. In order to reach many farmers in that district were a large number of extra men put out to that.

Over two hundred extra arms.

In the near future a list of the names of the families of those who are fighting for their country will be made available.

TOWN TEAM VS. COLLEGE

On Thursday evening of last week the college hockey team and the town team met for the first time this season in the town hall. Both teams were in fine form and both put up an excellent game. The game was fast from start to finish and the score broke in favor of the town team by seven to three. The game was well handled by referee H. W. Scott, and few penalties were given.

The lineup of the game was as follows:

College      Ontario      Town

G. Steeves      goal      D. Calderell

H. Nelson      point      K. Simpson

W. Porter      point      A. Amundsen

D. Hammund      centre      C. Gardner

The Mystery of the Ravenspurs

By Fred M. White

There was a light in the room. He could tell that by the saffron glow at the window. It was the same as usual. He knew the disposition of the room as well as he could see it. He had been here before he came to the bed "on which the woman lay."

Hipps touched her throat—a gentle touch—but his fingers crooked and a muscle of his desire blossomed like a rose in his hand. She was about and nobody would know. Who could tell? No one could be made with the doctor. Why not end life now?

"Far better," Hipps muttered. "It would have been no crime to shoot her like a dog. Yet fancy hangs for such a thing."

The grim humor of the suggestion restored Ralph to himself. He relaxed again, his hands clasped behind his throat and face. He could hear the sound of his own heart thumping.

A tiny pin had torn off the string of some dark cordial and brushed them across the woman's right lap. She stared faintly.

"Just as well to hasten events," he muttered. "I am bound to play with the thing."

He replaced the bottle in its position. He drew himself up, listening intently. His eyes met hers. She was heavy, and Marion was fearful lest they should fall with a clang and a smash.

Ralph stretched out his hand and drew back a chair to sit in the light. "I am used to this kind of work," he said. "I have done it many times."

She was silent. Her eyes were fixed on him. He could see her feet step back. But how now? They were cold, he could tell. Her brown contractions were sharp.

"So good," she muttered. "I did not expect this."

He lay down between the bed and the wall. Then he crawled under the deep valance. He had not long to wait. In the darkness of the room, somebody light of foot and thin of limb crept close to the bed. And this somebody shook the girl.

Toro was a deepening ring in Marion's voice. Ralph caressed her.

"Uncle Ralph, I cannot tell you. It is secret. If you know everything, my love—"

"Don't trouble," he said. "I know where I am going. You know?"

"Certainly I do. I know everything, my love."

"Not everything, uncle. Not of my connection with that woman, for instance."

"Indeed I do, Marion."

"You are aware of our relationship?"

"My dear child, I have known it for years. Your secret is safe with me. I am not here to betray you so far as your secret is concerned, done for me after all the time I have given you."

Angel Marion.

He repeated the last words over and over again, his voice soft, his voice pressing the girl's hand softly.

"Even so, even though I am a man, I am still a man," he said. "I am still a man."

"You are a good man, Marion."

THE REVIEW, CLARESHOLM, ALBERTA.

OUR RETURNED SOLDIERS

The establishment of the Soldiers Aid Commission for Ontario of which the Secretary is Mr. C. N. Cochran, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, is the first result of the report recently issued by the Hospitals Commission, and the fore-runner of others.

The care of the soldier who has returned to Canada, maimed or weak, enced as a result of active service, is the prime duty of Canadians. For some months the Canadian Patriotic Fund has been endeavoring to ensure that the men already back from Europe should suffer no want. This work has been voluntarily undertaken by local committees of the Fund; although in most instances their time is fully occupied with the task of making provision for the families of soldiers.

Each soldier is interviewed at Quebec by a representative of the Fund and a confidential report sent by him to the patriotic committee of the town to which the soldier is going. This serves the two-fold purpose of protecting the Fund against the greedy and unscrupulous and of giving the soldier a definite guarantee of incapacity or death rendering him "aforsid."

To the latter this account and largely because the pensions and gratuities paid to incapacitated men are oftentimes admittedly inadequate, it has been necessary to establish a Hospital Commission and Disability Board. The former is the chief factor in their report to the Federal Government, recommended among other measures, that provincial commissions be formed for the purpose of supplementing these pensions either by monetary grants or by free training in various trades. The Soldiers' Aid Commission of Ontario, as we have said above, is the first step in this direction. Although it has announced its intention of mobilizing the manufacturers of Ontario and we do not doubt that the process will be facilitated by the manufacturers themselves. Others will also be asked to lend their aid in discharging a great national duty and there is every prospect that in Canada at least the traditional tragedy of the returned soldier will have no place.

are wearing these badges are the worthiest citizens that we can acknowledge. Like charity, that badge should be allowed to overrule a multitude of sins.

The work that the Canadian Patriotic Fund can do for returned soldiers however, is limited by Act of Parliament, and it has been specifically enacted that no assistance can be given by the fund to "any person who is in receipt of any gratuity, pension or award made by His Majesty or by any foreign government in respect of incapacity or death occurring after April 1, 1914."

With regard to this subject, Mr. Morphy said: "The first point that I am going to touch upon is what is known as the high cost of living, and in connection with that I desire to call your attention to the cost of living of the Canadian workmen with the cost of living of the British workmen, the cost of living under what is known as a protective tariff, in Canada compared with the cost of living under a free trade or free food fiscal policy. That fair and germane to the subject at issue."

"I have taken the trouble to secure some figures in relation to the subject just mentioned. I have taken the rates of wages of various trades common in the city of Stratford, in the county of North Perth, which I have reason to believe to be representative of the same trades in the City of London, or rather throughout England, averaging wages. The figures in both cases I have had supplied to me by the Department of Labor of this Government, and I accept them as accurate. So far as the Canadian figures are concerned, I know that they are under rather than overstated. Let me tell you in what particular respects in regard to what pay he gets compared with the same kind of man in the Dominion of Canada under a protective policy:

RATES OF WAGES
Stratford, Ontario, and English Mane facturing Compared

In April, 1914, before the war was upon us, and the high cost of living claimed our attention, Mr. H. B. Morphy, the member for North Perth, in writing to the Minister of Labour, made a speech in the course of the budget debate, in which he gave some interesting figures bearing on the average wages in the trades throughout England and Canada.

With regard to this subject, Mr. Morphy said: "The first point that I am going to touch upon is what is known as the high cost of living, and in connection with that I desire to call your attention to the cost of living of the Canadian workmen with the cost of living of the British workmen, the cost of living under what is known as a protective tariff, in Canada compared with the cost of living under a free trade or free food fiscal policy. "I could go over the whole range of industrial life, and show that the artisan in the Dominion of Canada, in general, receives a higher wage than the artisan in Great Britain to the same class of artisan in Great Britain, and that the artisan in Canada receives a higher wage than does any laborer man with whom he is likely to come in contact.

It is evident, Hon. gentlemen opposite desire to bring us to the same conclusion as Great Britain is in on the question of prices. In Northern Ontario, which is a like situation, the idea that he likes good wages and steady work. was, "What was slavery introduced into America?"

To this he replied, "It came over to the wanted to have slaves, so they sent over a shipload of girls. The planters gladly married them, and slavery was

"What's the good of murthering the "Bill," the poor gasped, as he entered

"Say, John, what's wrong?" the friend

"Well, I've written a poem about

"Yes?"

Interesting Proposals For Getting and Keeping the Children in School

(Contributed by Norman F. Black,

M.A., D.P.Ed., Regina).

No subject is receiving more general and thoughtful attention these days than that of ways and means of securing a good educational policy of a school for every child and every child school, which has been proposed by the Canadian Teachers' Education League and by the people's political leaders in the legislative assemblies.

Thousands of Saskatchewan school trustees are in agreement with the fact that there has always been the case but the people are no longer content merely to let things alone.

Practical suggestions are commencing to be forthcoming for remedying the evils of the present situation, and the solution is to the fact that it is just as important to have the school system as it is that they should be educated as any other child should.

Indeed, the lack of school facilities is already helping to draw many citizens to settle outside of their best cities.

In addition, it is important to meet the wants by transporting these children to public expense to the nearest town or city where it is impracticable, many people declare that the state would help provide for the education of the children through boarding schools.

Other agents are suggesting what the school people should do—schools. Somebody has nicknamed these proposed schools "College Education." Such a school on wheels would be made just large enough to hold a teacher and two or more that many children are to be educated in a community where a school must be established.

It would be possible to employ the services of a teacher who would have continuous employment, and would be able to live in the community.

For example, a lone teacher or a teacher-laborer or a teacher-laborer in a fringe of settlement where ordinary schools do not exist, could be induced to settle in the community say three months, or longer, if the settlers were ready for the experience of having a teacher in their midst. Such a car could be built and equipped, it is claimed, at an expense that would not be greater than the amount to buy $500 or thereabouts, and the teacher would receive a salary equal to the teacher's salary.

What do you think of the scheme? Have you any better suggestion? Let me know what you think of them.

They are the children that attend school at all, or attend very irregularly, even though they live in a community where there is a school.

What is the cost of sending a child to the top and bottom of the hill? If the settlers are ready for the experience of having a teacher in their midst, how much will it cost?

These are questions which are now being seriously studied by the intelligent people of the west. Are you one of them?
